Hippie Chic Sayulita

The picturesque fishing village of Sayulita Mexico offers visitors and residents incredible beaches, lush jungles and taste of rural Mexico. Located on the Pacific coast of Nayarit, Mexico, this pueblo is slowly gaining popularity as a vacation/second home destination with plenty of North Americans. With cobblestone streets hosting dogs, chickens and playing children, Sayulita is a half-century away from nearby Puerto Vallarta and its huge resorts, discos and parasailing. Sayulita's location is ideal, only 25 minutes north of Punta Mita.

The town of Sayulita in Bahia de Banderas has been granted the denomination of "Pueblo Magico" (Magic Town), making it the second town with this title in the state of Nayarit.

Huichol Indigenous Art Workshop

Huichol art broadly groups the most traditional and most recent innovations in the folk art and handicrafts produced by the Huichol people, who live in the states of Jalisco, Durango, Zacatecas and Nayarit in Mexico. The unifying factor of the work is the colorful decoration using symbols and designs which date back centuries. The most common and commercially successful products are bead art. The Huichol have a long history of beading, making the beads from clay, shells, corals, seeds and more using them to make jewelry and to decorate bowls and other items. The "modern" beadwork usually consists of masks and wood sculptures covered in small, brightly colored commercial beads fastened with wax and resin. While the materials have changed a bit, the religious purpose involve have not change over the years.

The religious faith of the Huichols is still based on a "trinity" of veneration of the deer, corn, and peyote. The last is ritually gathered each year on a long pilgrimage to the desert area of San Luis Potosí, where the people are said to have originated and used by shamans. They did not have a written language until recently, so these symbols were and are the primary form of preserving the ceremonies, myths, and beliefs of ancient Huichol religion. Allow the Huichol master craftsman Rutukame Gonzalez lead us through the journey of his hands to teach us the most beautiful of magic and the color of Mexico.

Activity length:
2.5 hours approximately
